

Fran Way Legacy Award

Fran Way has devoted her nursing career to the advancement of the Women's Health Nurse Practitioner (WHNP) role. For that reason, the National Association of Nurse Practitioners in Women's Health (NPWH) has implemented the Fran Way Legacy Award. Each year, NPWH will actively seek nominations for this award that will be bestowed to a WHNP who has demonstrated commitment to women's health through practice, education and advocacy.

Fran Way Legacy Award Criteria for Selection:

- Certified WHNP
- An individual who has exhibited extraordinary vision by sustaining the WHNP role and providing a specific contribution to expand the scope of practice
- An individual who has demonstrated passionate advocacy for the WHNP role through leadership at the local, state, national, or international level
- An individual with an outstanding commitment to advancing the WHNP role
- The individual must be an active member of NPWH

Nomination Requirements:

- Nomination statements highlighting the nominee's contribution to the WHNP role (maximum 500 words)
- Minimum of two support letters from an individual involved with the nominee's activities that support the nomination activities
- Curriculum Vitae of the nominee

The nomination period for 2019 is now open. Nominees can be self-nominated or submitted by another individual. Nominations should be submitted to bmancillas@npwh.org by July 15, 2019. Only complete application packets will be considered. Notification of this lifetime award will be announced by August 2, 2019 and an award will be presented during the NPWH Annual Conference in October. For questions or more information, please contact NPWH at bmancillas@npwh.org.

Past Recipients:

2018: Fran Way